

Selecting Reliable Sources Criteria criteria - level 1

level focus	1 - Beginning to Develop	2 - At Expected Level	3 - Above Expected Level
	I can name the learning sources given to me to use I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary I can identify the author of each source I can identify the date of publication I can identify whether or not there are other sources that provide the same information I can tell why I am using each source	I can select sources from different mediums if available I can select a minimum of two learning sources with guidance I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary I can identify the author of each source I can identify the author's reputation, and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify the date of publication I can identify one other source that provides the same information I can justify all sources selected I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing	I can select sources from different mediums if available I can select a minimum of two learning sources independently and identify each one specifically (ie. Swans in Ireland in the National Geographic) I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary I can select a minimum of one primary source of information if available I can identify the author of each source I can identify the author's reputation and credentials, and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify the date of publication and I can reject the source if outdated I can identify the genre of the publication and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify one other source that provides the same information and determine its independence and reject if unsatisfactory I can justify all sources selected I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing

Selecting Reliable Sources Criteria criteria - level 2

level focus	1 - Beginning to Develop	2 - At Expected Level	3 - Above Expected Level
	I can select sources from different mediums if available	I can select sources from different mediums if available	I can select sources from different mediums if available
	I can select a minimum of two learning sources with guidance	I can select a minimum of two learning sources independently and identify each one specifically (ie. Swans in Ireland in the National Geographic)	I can select a minimum of two learning sources independently and identify each one specifically (ie. Swans in Ireland in the National Geographic)
	I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary	I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary	I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary
		I can select a minimum of one primary source of information if available	I can select a minimum of two primary sources of information if available
	I can identify the author of each source	I can identify the author of each source	I can identify the author of each source
	I can identify the author's reputation, and reject the source if unsatisfactory	I can identify the author's reputation and credentials , and reject the source if unsatisfactory	I can identify the author's reputation, credentials, vested interests , and reject the source if unsatisfactory
	I can identify the date of publication	I can identify the date of publication and I can reject the source if outdated	I can identify the date of publication and I can reject the source if outdated
		I can identify the genre of the publication and reject the source if unsatisfactory	I can identify the genre and reputation of the publication and reject the source if unsatisfactory
	I can identify one other source that provides the same information	I can identify one other source that provides the same information and determine its independence and reject if unsatisfactory	I can identify more than one source providing the same information; determine their independence and reject if unsatisfactory
	I can justify all sources selected	I can justify all sources selected	I can justify all sources selected
	I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing	I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing	I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing

Selecting Reliable Sources Criteria criteria

level focus	1 - Beginning to Develop	2 - At Expected Level	3 - Above Expected Level
	I can select sources from different mediums if available I can select a minimum of two learning sources independently and identify each one specifically (ie. Swans in Ireland in the National Geographic) I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary I can select a minimum of one primary source of information if available I can identify the author of each source I can identify the author's reputation and credentials, and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify the date of publication and I can reject the source if outdated I can identify the genre of the publication and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify one other source that provides the same information and determine its independence and reject if unsatisfactory I can justify all sources selected I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing	I can select sources from different mediums if available I can select a minimum of two learning sources independently and identify each one specifically (ie. Swans in Ireland in the National Geographic) I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary I can select a minimum of two primary sources of information if available I can identify the author of each source I can identify the author's reputation, credentials, vested interests, and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify the date of publication and I can reject the source if outdated I can identify the genre and reputation of the publication and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify more than one source providing the same information; determine their independence and reject if unsatisfactory I can justify all sources selected I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing	I can select sources from all available mediums I can select a minimum of two learning sources independently and identify each one specifically (ie. Swans in Ireland in the National Geographic) I can identify whether each source is primary or secondary I can select a minimum of three primary sources of information if available I can select sources that represent a minimum of two perspectives if possible I can identify the credibility of any primary source used by a secondary source (using these criteria) I can identify the author of each source I can identify the author's reputation, credentials, vested interests, and biases and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify the date of publication and I can reject the source if outdated I can identify the genre and reputation of the publication and reject the source if unsatisfactory I can identify more than one source providing the same information; determine their independence and reject if unsatisfactory I can justify all sources selected I can reference my sources using my criteria for referencing